Memo.

The Government Chavadi in Kankanhalli.

In the Government Chavadi at Kasba Kankanhalli, there is a small temple of Vinayaka which has stood there for years past. The Chavadi building is reported to be in a dilapidated state.

2. In January 1893, the Deputy Commissioner reported that the combination of the Chavadi and the temple was inconvenient both to Government and the people alike, and therefore proposed that the Chavadi instead of being repaired, might be sold to the Votaries of the Temple at a reasonable price and a new Chavadi built by Government instead. The Deputy Commissioner was then asked to report what the estimated market value of the Chavadi would be and what sum would the Votaries of the Temple pay for it.

3 In reply the Deputy Commissioner reports that the materials of the building are old and unserviceable, but that the site of the Chavadi which is situated in the main bazaar street may be worth Rs 200-- . But, however, the deputy Commissioner adds, that the site would not fetch any value as long as the Temple standing in it could not be removed, and that the Votaries have offered for the site only Rs 50---, which is the most that they could pay considering their poor condition. The deputy Commissioner therefore recommends that the building instead of being sold for the paltry sum of Rs 50---, may be left as it is for use as a place of public worship, the execution of the needful repairs thereto being left to the Votaries of the Temple.

Note.

The Temple has a gograss allowance of Rs 4-9-- a year. It has evidently stood in the Chavadi for many years, and being situated in the main Bazaar street is worshipped

by

by a large number of people. I would not therefore disturb the temple but would support the Deputy Commissioner's recommendation to make a free-gift of the Chavadi to the Temple itself

As regards — the construction of a new Chavadi the Deputy Commissioner may address the Government in the General Department.

Sir,

I have the honor to bring to the notice of the Government, that the Kasba Chavady at Kankanhully, Kankanhully Taluk, is in a dilapidated condition and has, besides, a small temple in it. The building admittedly belongs to the Government, but the combination of the Chavady and the temple is inconvenient to Government and people alike. Instead of restoring it, where it stands now, I would sell it to the votaries of the Temple, at a reasonable price and build a new Chavady. I beg to solicit Sanction to do so.

All old Chavadies have temples in front as a rule. Usually deities of the village are there.

To
The Chief Secretary to the Dewan of Mysore.

Sir,

In reference to your docket No. 13503 / G-3001 dated 4th February 1893, asking for certain information regarding the Chavadi at Kan Kanhully, I have the honor to report that the Chavadi in question is situated in the main Bazaar street and is therefore, in my opinion, worth not less than 200 Rs including the land. In fact it is the land that is valuable. The Votaries are mostly poor persons and cannot afford to pay the market price. The most that they can pay is Rs 50/. their Muchilka offering to pay that amount (deducting Rs 7/. which under a wrong order of the Sub Division Officer they have already paid) in two months is enclosed. The materials of the building being old and mostly unserviceable have hardly any value, nor can the land which is valuable, fetch any price unless the temple on it be permitted to be removed. If the votaries declined to pay for the charadi, the Government would hardly get any price, as I am sure the Government would not permit the removal of the temple. For this reason and on the ground of the poverty of the votaries of the temple, I beg to recommend that the Government may be pleased to lease the building as it is for use as a place of public worship rather than sell it for a paltry sum of Rs 50/. If the Government approve of my recommendation,

I shall get the votaries to spend the Rs 50/- on necessary repairs. In that case, we shall have to build a new chavadi.

2. There can be no doubt that the temple which is a low, small structure came into existence after the chavadi was built, but it has stood there for many years.

I have the honor to be
Sir,
Your most obedient Servant.

No. 183 dy 20/21/8/94
Muzr 20-94

In January 1893, the Deputy Commr. reported that the Govt. Chavadi at Kasaba Kankanhalli, in which also stands a Vinayaka temple was in a dilapidated condition, and that as the combination of the Chavadi and the temple was inconvenient both to Govt and the people alike, he proposed that the Chavadi instead of being repaired, might be sold to the votaries of the temple at a reasonable price, and a new Chavadi built by Govt instead.

The Deputy Commr was thereupon asked to report what the estimated market-value of the Chavadi would be, and what sum the votaries of the temple would pay for it.
2. In reply, he now reports that the materials of the building are old and unserviceable, that the votaries have offered for it Rs 50/- only, and that as the site of the Chavadi is situated in the main bazaar-street, it may be worth Rs 200/- but adds however that there is no chance of this or any price being realized unless the temple is completely removed from the Chavadi. He therefore recommends that the building instead of being sold for the paltry sum of Rs 50/- may be left as it is for use as a place of public worship, the execution of needful repairs thereto being left to the votaries of the temple.

3. Having regard to the fact that the temple has stood in the Chavadi for many years past, and that it is much resorted to by a large number of people for purposes of ~~public~~ worship, the Govt are pleased to approve of the Dy Commr's recommendation to make a free-gift of the Chavadi to the temple.

4. As regards the construction of a new Chavadi the Dy Commr will be requested to address the Govt in the Genl Department.
